➔ Online Business Fax - Simplifying Business Communication By: William R. Nabaza of www.Nabaza.com

Online Business Fax - Simplifying Business Communication By: William R. Nabaza of www.Nabaza.com

Online fax is so innovative and revolutionary that it has totally changed our perception on how to do business on a fax machine. Forcing old technology like fax to innovate or upgrade itself to it's latest technology brings some more benefits for us namely: it is more reliable, secure and lot faster than traditional faxing methods.

Faxing On The Go:

With online fax, you can completely go mobile while bringing your mobile phone with you as your own fax machine, to send and receive fax using your mobile with internet capabilities is a breeze and gives you more convenience, plus it saves a lot of time. You know for sure that you can have access anytime to your fax messages wherever you go, halfway around the globe or whether you're in a totally different time zone.

No New Equipments Required:

You don't need to purchase another unit of fax machine. All you need is a computer with internet connection, an email address and a subscription to an online fax provider.

Automatic Resending Of Messages:

Online fax machine for the most part is an online software that makes sure that your fax messages are received on the other end, if not, you can set it up to resend an entire fax message. When using fax machines, and upon hearing a busy fax tone, you need to redial the same number over and over again until the busy fax tone is gone, and you can send the fax. Switch to online fax to do your business for you, with online fax your fax messages are considered to be sent to the other end, thus simplifying your business communications.

Digitized Freedom:

After composing the fax content for your online fax message, all you have to do is send it without the need to print it first. It's as easy and simple as sending your email. You can send the entire fax message to multiple recipients at the click of a button only once and rest assured your online fax message is received on the other business end. You also have the option of saving fax messages that you can send to different multiple recipients at a later time. How you do with your email, is the same thing you do with your online fax. Receiving your fax is the same thing, it goes first from fax to email, then you receive it online wherever you are. You can also send out fax messages from Microsoft (tm) applications. Send and receive online fax by iphone, blackberry, android, windows mobile and palm.

Alert Features:

After sending your fax, you will be alerted via email that your fax message has been sent successfully, no need to call up the recipient asking them if they have received your fax. This also goes true if you have received a fax from someone else. The bottom line is now you're reachable wherever and whenever you are. You're always at the right place at the right time for your business clients.

To summarize the benefits and advantage of an online fax are: (a) easy - as simple and easy as sending an email; (b) cost effective: As low as U.S.$6.95/month; (c) reliable - never jammed, busy or out of paper, the online fax software handles every resend in case of failed sent; (d) convenient - fax and receive from anywhere.

Email Courses, Autoresponders And Highly Recommended Autoresponders By: William R. Nabaza of www.Nabaza.com

Offering free things to your website visitors is one marketing method that often results in a lot of sales. Free courses that are delivered via email are very popular, and people sign up for such courses on a regular basis to learn more about a topic of interest to them. These courses are best maintained and delivered with the use of autoresponders.

An autoresponder can be set up to send out a series of lessons for an email course. The lessons can be set for distribution at specific intervals. You determine how often the lessons for the course are sent to the people who have signed up for it. Email courses are very different from traditional courses, web based courses, or any other type of course.

There is no student and instructor interaction. The instructor writes the information out, puts each lesson in an autoresponder series, sets the timing for the lessons, and the rest is automated. You can opt to have lessons delivered daily, every other day, every three days, or any other time frame that you think works best for your email students.

Email courses are commonly used to sell products and services. For instance, if you sell widgets, you might develop a course that teaches people how to use widgets or how to care for their widget. Experts agree that an email course can be written for almost any product that you can imagine – if you put enough thought into it.

Start by determining what your course will be about, and how long it should be. If the course should be delivered every other day for two weeks, you know that you would need seven lessons. Write the lessons, and load them in the autoresponder. Set the interval for each lesson, which in this case would be 1, 3, 5, 7, 9, 11, and 13.

This means that the first lesson would be delivered one day after the person has requested the course, and the second lesson would be delivered three days after the person has requested the course, and so on. The interval for each lesson is set for the number of days after the person has signed up. Make sure that everything is spelled right, and that your sentences are grammatically correct. You want the lessons to look and sound as professional as possible.

Next, simply advertise the email address that will activate the autoresponder. Make sure that you run a test first, sending each lesson to yourself. This will allow you to see what your email students will see when they sign up!

and RPG Maker VX, which have an extensive Western fanbase, IG Maker extends the company's easy to use, click and drop game creation software into multiple new game genres, with three major styles of game supported and Windows executable, XNA (Xbox 360) and Flash export possible.

Without need for programming or complex graphic design skills, this allows users to create classic 2D, top-down action RPG games, side-scrolling platform action games, and even classic vertically and horizontally scrolling 2D shooters, with fun-to-play example games included to analyze and dissect.

Using the simple-to-adjust interface, with flow-based graphical representations of levels, title screens, and more, it's straightforward for even novices to create fully-featured games. In particular, the tool features a robust animation editor, tile-based level layout and the ability to easily put together a multitude of different gameplay combinations.

IG Maker users can even combine multiple genre types in one game, with hybrids such as a top-down 'overworld', with platform game levels when players enter buildings or dungeons. The result can be exported to a Windows executable-compatible format for online distribution, with additional possibilities including XNA Framework export (potentially enabling upload onto Xbox Live Indie Games), and Flash export.

can even use ready-made graphics for heroes and monsters, so all you have to do is give them stats and a names.

Townpeople, dungeons, treasure chests, boss battles - all of the things that help develop an RPG's story can be created through events. You'll find a wide array of events stored under Event Commands, from simple text and graphic displays to variable-wrangling technical tricks. Just select a series of commands and you've created an event. You can even find clever ways of stringing together these commands for more sophisticated events-or sneak in a trap or two.

RPG Maker XP comes complete with tons of sample data, including graphics for characters, monsters, map tiles, magic effects, battles, and more. You'll never have to draw a single pixel if you use these ready-made materials to create your RPG masterpiece. Of course, you can also create your own unique graphics for games. RPG Maker XP supports the PNG graphic format as well as MIDI, WAV, and Ogg Vorbis sound formats, making it easy to include your own original data.

Save your completed game as a game disk and you can burn it onto a CD-ROM to give to your friends or distribute it over the Internet for other gamers to enjoy. You can even market your creations as shareware.

it's latest, stable version? Or much better put, how much will you invest on someone to update all your computer software drivers? Will that person be ever reliable? Will that person be honest with you? A person or group of people are not the answer, software is the answer.

Why is there a need to update all your software drivers? The obvious answer is missing, corrupt or outdated device drivers will ruin your computer somehow and in some way without you knowing it. Here's a list of PC problems associated with old PC drivers.

- BSOD (blue screen of death) will be on your screen.
- You will read error messages that only a computer techie or computer can understands, totally illogical for you.
- The sound will be gone from your PC.
- You can't enjoy the video.
- Your webcam will stop functioning.
- Your printer will be totally useless for you.
- You will not enjoy images on your screen.
- You will not enjoy 3D animation or full-color graphics
- Input devices like joystick, keyboard, mouse, speakers will stop functioning when you're in a multimedia program

You will say yeah it's simple just run Microsoft(tm) update and it will all be fixed. Problem is Microsoft(tm) will only update it's native and known drivers. What about a fitting driver that will suit your computer's brand, model and not to mention your OS (operating system)

Plan B is to do it manually. Here's a list of what you have to do for it to be accomplished manually:

1. List down all the hundreds devices, brands and their respective manufacturers.
2. List down all the driver dates, versions currently used on your PC.
3. Visit each manufacturer's website, find their download pages for your said hardware.
4. Search the manufacturer's website for the specific driver you're searching, might take hours on one single driver.
5. Check driver dates and versions if you're downloading the latest. Before you're done with one, the others have already been obsolete.
6. Download new drivers on your PC. Remember if you fail one here, downloaded and installed one mistaken driver your PC will freeze.
7. Install new drivers.
8. Repeat steps 1-7 again for the second driver, 3/100+ drivers still waiting.

or do it the DriverFinder way.

Benefits of DriverFinder:

1. No waste of your time, it means business.
2. Eliminates frustrations of not being able to find the exact drivers you need.
3. No need to become a techie just to find, download and install each driver.
4. Eliminates the fear of ruining your PC, making it useless for you.
5. No need to sacrifice your time and effort to work on a slow, pitiable PC.

To avoid the fear of the unknown for you as a user, here's some few easy steps what DriverFinder will do to your PC.

Step 1:
Accurately Scans Your PC
DriverFinder will identify your PC brand, model, software brand, software versions in lightning speed and laser-precision.

Step 2:
Compares Drivers and Provides Updates.
DriverFinder will compare your currently installed drivers to it's deep, ever-expanding DriverFinder Driver Database (DDD)

 IT Consolidation with HP and VMware for the Midmarket
10/7/2010

SOLUTION BRIEF

For midsize companies, implementing virtualization addresses many challenges. It helps you do more with less—enabling you to be more strategic and able to grow your business. Virtualization allows you to compete with larger organizations as well as your immediate competition. In addition, it helps you build complete IT environments offering high availability, resiliency, and disaster recovery options more affordably than non-virtualized environments.

 Drive Even Greater Efficiency With Virtualization
10/7/2010

REPORT

This report examines the transition from a period of Strategic Consolidation to one of focused Process Improvement, stages two to three in Forrester's Virtualization Maturity Model. Through in-depth interviews with numerous IT professionals across North America, Europe, and Asia Pacific, Forrester found that those companies that had changed their operational processes to reflect the unique needs of a virtual infrastructure achieved higher return on investment, greater administrator productivity, more predictable deployments, and simpler problem identification and resolution than those that had simply virtualized and stuck with traditional procedures.

The natural disasters of recent years, together with manmade disasters such as the rolling blackouts in California and unintended fires, have made business continuity a priority for many organizations. Unplanned downtime is not restricted to disasters, and can include everyday unforeseen situations such as the failure of HVAC units, hardware failures, and human error. In today's global economy, any significant downtime may result not only in immediate revenue losses, but can also have a lasting impact that defines an organization's ability to survive.

How Do You Know if Your Talent Management Strategy is Creating Value?
10/4/2010

Keeping up with the speed of business is no small task. Organizations today have constant and increasing pressures from shareholders, stock analysts, customers, and employees to execute better, faster, and cheaper, while continuing to increase value. The natural cycle of talent management creates an everchanging priority list coming from multiple directions for HR. For an HR organization to adequately respond to the demands, it must address the entire talent lifecycle as a whole, even if the mission-critical process is a subset of that lifecycle. Individual teams operating in silos, recruiting or learning and development,

for example,
will only be able to manage the transactions
they are responsible for – and nothing more – creating a big gap in any truly successful talent management strategy.

» [Social Media Marketing GPS --
Free 91 Page eBook](#)
10/1/2010

Social Media
Marketing GP began as an experiment to learn if marketers would be receptive to,
and find value
in, a new book genre built on a succession o
tweet
interviews about one business topic
social media
marketing. Th goal was to create a comprehensiv body of knowledge tha could serve as a roadmap

(GPS) for developing a strategic social media plan. My thoughts were if this could be accomplished in a series of 140 character tweets it might help ease the apprehension for people new to social media, while at the same time providing a review and offering some interesting ideas for those more experienced.

Forty prominent marketers from Canada, England, India and the United States were interviewed on Twitter. The focus was on how to leverage social media, not in terms of the technology, but as a vehicle to build and nurture stronger business relationships. Each tweet included the hash tag #smgps.

What developed was the first business book of interviews written on Twitter by the people who were working in the space. Twitter became both a content platform and a distribution channel.
